HOOKS

1. Washed your car and found another chip on the bumper? Protect the paint that faces the road first.
2. Your bumper takes the first hit from loose stones. Give that exposed paint protection before chips appear.
3. Those little dots on your bumper aren't always dirt. Road debris could be leaving chips in your paint.
4. If every highway trip ends with you checking your bumper for chips, give yourself less to worry about.
5. Stuck behind a gravel truck and worried about your bumper? Put protection between flying stones and your paint.
6. Your daily commute puts your bumper in the path of road debris. Protect it before more chips appear.
7. Just bought a new car? Your front bumper starts facing road debris the moment you drive it home.
8. That freshly painted bumper looks great right now. Give it protection before loose gravel leaves its mark.
9. Tired of touching up tiny chips on your bumper? Make protecting the paint part of your next move.
10. Another stone chip means another mark you can't unsee. Give your front bumper protection before the next drive.
